Community-Based Research Teaching and Learning

As my research involves working collaboratively with people with lived experience, I have also designed and taught training a comprehensive community-based research training curriculum for more than 40 women living with HIV from diverse backgrounds. This covered traditional topics related to research methods (e.g., ethics, recruitment strategies, interviewing practices, data quality, knowledge translation, community-based research principles) as well as the unique ethical tensions found in HIV and sexual health research (e.g., power in research teams, diversity of participants, traversing patient/researcher roles, unlearning prejudices, decolonizing methods, trauma-informed practice, strategies for self-care).

Professional Development

1. Instructional Skills Workshop. "BOPPPS Model for Planning Lessons." Simon Fraser University. Burnaby, Canada. August 23-25, 2017.
2. 16th Annual Symposium on Teaching and Learning. "Voices of Diversity & Inclusion: Vulnerabilities, Tensions, & Opportunities." Simon Fraser University. Burnaby, Canada. May 17-18, 2017.

Courses Prepared To Teach

1. Global Perspectives on Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights
